FIND YOUR TRUE NORTH

THE ARCTIC 2022-2023

You've never heard silence like this... all-encompassing and beautifully orchestrated, it fills the air with a wonderful stillness, mirrored by the icy seas that stretch to the horizon. Colours change by the hour as wildlife you've never seen before comes to life. The Arctic is a one-of-a-kind universe, full of extremes and contrasts, where harsh conditions have shaped the entire region into one of the most beautiful places on Earth. And where you can still find unexplored landscapes to discover and a wilderness beyond your wildest dreams.

“Silent, massive glaciers glide alongside shores teeming with unique flora and fauna... the Arctic is a unique mix of colours, climates and cultures, wrapped in a rich history of exploration that stretches the boundaries of human experience.”

BARBARA MUCKERMANN, CHIEF COMMERCIAL OFFICER, SILVERSEA CRUISES

*“Together with our local experts we’ll discover the true soul of the Arctic, a place of breathtaking scenery, unusual wildlife and stark contrasts.
Each time I visit I feel like I’m on a different planet!”*

SVP EXPEDITIONS, TURNAROUND OPERATIONS AND DESTINATION MANAGEMENT, SILVERSEA CRUISES

“The Arctic is simply amazing, from the ground up. Some of the rocks underfoot are among the oldest on the planet, while others were originally part of a coral reef that was actually located at the Equator ages ago. It’s a place of beauty like no other...”

STEFAN KREDEL, SENIOR DIRECTOR OF EXPEDITION DEVELOPMENT AND OPERATIONS, SILVERSEA CRUISES

WELCOME TO YOUR ARCTIC

As you float alongside blue-green glaciers in glass-like waters, the only sounds you hear are the crackling of millennial ice and your own heartbeat, as the awesome silence of the Arctic speaks right to your soul. Welcome to one of the most remote places on Earth: a dramatic region of breathtaking scenery, frozen oceans and rugged features. Encompassing the entire northernmost area of the planet, it stretches across a wide range of geographies, nations and cultures: from Greenland, the world's largest island, to the Russian Arctic; from the Canadian Arctic and Nunavut to Norway's Svalbard archipelago. And, of course, at the very top, the North Pole. The stuff of dreams, ambitions and bucket lists, the region is sparsely populated with a unique mix of peoples who have learned to adapt to the Arctic's extreme cold and harsh conditions over millennia. The name Arctic comes from the ancient Greek Arktos, meaning "bear", a reference to the Great Bear constellation, and a word adopted to indicate a northerly direction. This moniker is doubly appropriate as we can also think of the great white Polar Bears wandering the region's shores, one of a handful of species populating the Arctic year-round. Join us and a long line of intrepid explorers - from the first Vikings to sail north of the Arctic Circle in the 10th century, to American explorer Robert Peary's contested first visit to the geographic North Pole - and see what it's like to really be on top of the world.

The Arctic in numbers

OVER 260 SPECIES OF TERRESTRIAL FAUNA

The Arctic has a seasonal population of roughly 200 species of birds, about 2% of all global avian species. Each summer, thousands of seabirds flock here to breed in the area's numerous colonies. Of the 61 terrestrial mammal species here, only the most resilient hang around to survive the brutally cold and dark winter months, including the Arctic Fox, Svalbard Reindeer and Polar Bear.

3°-12° C

(37°- 54° F)

SUMMER TEMPERATURES

ICE SHEETS

7.7%

OF EARTH'S SUPPLY OF FRESHWATER.

Around 77% of the planet's freshwater is found in ice sheets, one-tenth of which is found in the Greenland Ice Sheet alone. This means 7.7% of the world's freshwater is right here, inside an ice sheet covering a staggering 1.71 million sq km.

12 SPECIES
OF MARINE FAUNA

There are 12 species of marine mammals regularly inhabiting the Arctic: the polar bear, walrus, four species of whale (Bowhead, Grey, Narwhal and Beluga) and six species of ice seal (Bearded, Ribbon, Ringed, Spotted, Harp and Hooded). Several additional species are also seen occasionally, including the Harbour Porpoise, as well as Sperm, Blue, Fin, Humpback and Killer Whales.

1,700 SPECIES
OF PLANT

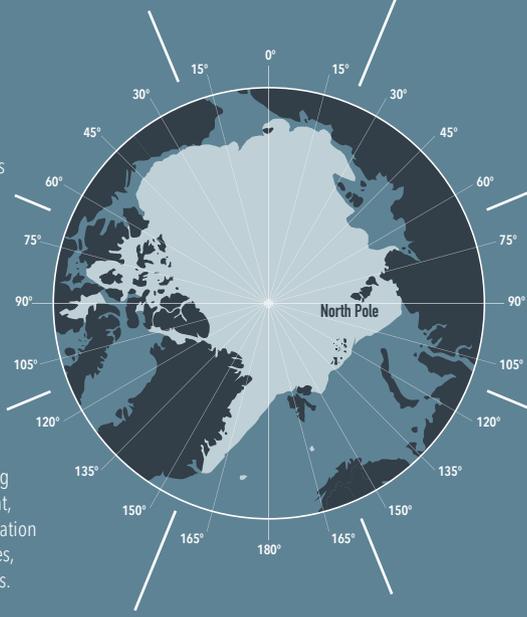

Many plant species have developed surprising strategies to survive in this harsh environment, including asexual reproduction. Tundra vegetation grows low and mainly features sedges, grasses, dwarf shrubs, wildflowers, mosses and lichens.

ICE THICKNESS 2/3 km

About 98% thick continental ice sheet and 2% barren rock. Much of Ice Sheet is over 2km thick and it is 3km at its thickest point. If the whole 2.85 million cubic kilometres of ice were to melt it would raise global sea levels by 7.2m or 23.6ft.

1906 FIRST
EXPLORATION

The Northwest Passage was first navigated by famed Norwegian polar explorer Roald Amundsen, who also led the first successful expedition to the South Pole.

4M POPULATION

The approximately four million people living in the Arctic are mostly made up of indigenous populations.

WILDER THAN WILD

You'll be amazed at the unique wildlife of the Arctic

From white Polar Bears to dark brown Arctic Wolves, the diversity of wildlife in this region is extraordinary. Hundreds of species of terrestrial and marine fauna roam the varied Arctic landscapes and seascapes, and you'll be right in the middle of it, whether hiking across green tundra or gently floating on icy clear waters in a Zodiac. You might just spot a Beluga whale off the bays and inlets of Canada and Greenland, or spot herds of reindeer grazing on the shore. But the real surprise is the sheer number of bird species you'll find here. With over 200 different types of birds present in the Arctic alone, you'll be in awe at how many flock together in immense colonies stretching across the cliffs and hillsides of this incredible region. One of these is the Arctic Tern, a feisty avian that, at first glance, seems entirely unassuming with its diminutive black and white frame and regular-sized orange beak. But don't be fooled, as the Arctic Tern actually migrates further than any other bird, and, indeed, any other animal, on Earth. Every year it flies from the Arctic to the Antarctic for breeding and feeding, and then flies all the way back. A truly extraordinary traveller that mimics our own passion and desire for exploration.

Arctic Tern soaring and looking for the fish, Iceland

Polar Bear

POLAR BEAR

The polar bear is Nature's white knight, courageously roaming the Arctic tundra and glaciers, often solo, dipping into the icy seas for food. Unlike other bears, they're classified as marine mammals, as they depend on the sea for life and prefer spending winters hunting seals and swimming between ice floes to hibernation. Their thick white coat provides both warmth and camouflage, so spotting them on your travels takes practice and concentration. A small hint: it's much easier to do in summer, as the land and tundra are bare of snow.

Wild Reindeer, Svalbard

SVALBARD REINDEER

Never tamed or herded by any of the peoples of the Arctic, these reindeer are truly wild. Thanks to the coarse, hollow hairs on their pelts and shorter legs than their continental relatives - reindeer in Europe, caribou in North America - heat loss is minimised as much as possible. In summer, they fatten up by feeding on the vegetation found in valleys across the Arctic, while in winter they graze atop wind-swept ridges, where snow is most shallow.

Walrus, Spitsbergen, Svalbard

WALRUS

Weighing up to two tonnes - as much as a small SUV - the walrus is most mobile while at sea, diving down to the seabed to feed on swimming crustaceans or suck clam flesh from their shells. They use their immense tusks to haul their massive bodies on to shore or on to ice floes and male walruses, also known as bulls, use their tusks for seasonal battle, competing for dominance within their respective groups. The winner gets to swim around a group of females, calling out with unique grunts and yells that come from the large air sack under their throats.

Arctic Fox with summer coat

ARCTIC FOX

The Arctic Fox has adapted to the harshness and hardships of this unique region, by tunnelling into snow to curl up for heat during blizzards, and evolving to feature fur that changes colour from season to season. White fur in the winter and brown fur in the summer provide both warmth and camouflage year-round, and allow the Arctic Fox to withstand frigid temperatures of -50°C . Often seen trotting about near regular foraging routes and other food sources, like bird colonies and shorelines, they sometimes trail polar bears on sea ice to scavenge the remains of seal kills.

A raw experience of adventure through jaw-dropping, beautiful landscapes, we'll visit remote shores and unique coastlines. This is a part of the world where survival is difficult, and few have persevered against the odds, including the magnificent wildlife that roams across this largely untouched part of the world. We'll visit ancient Soviet outposts and witness cultural paradoxes you never imagined possible, including people and towns hidden from view and from history itself.

ALWAYS FIRST CLASS

Silver Cloud in Poolepynten, Svalbard

We're committed to making your time with us in the Arctic unforgettable. Though it spans across one of the most remote regions in the world, Silversea's premium ships and service allow you to enjoy the region's spellbinding beauty in absolute comfort and elegance.

SMALL-SHIP INTIMACY

Big on creature comforts and luxuries, our small all-suite ships feel personal and convivial. Thanks to their compact size - ranging from 120 to 137 suites - our Expedition ships Silver Wind and Silver Cloud are both designed to comfortably access the most remote and hard-to-reach areas of the Arctic, with both featuring our legendary elegant and intimate atmosphere onboard.

SUPERIOR SERVICE

With nearly a member of staff for every guest, the personalised service onboard our Expeditions ships is unparalleled. You'll be catered to and pampered each and every day, as our staff learns to anticipate your needs. Every Silversea suite features a butler, so after a day out on the ice you just might find a steaming hot cup of your favourite tea waiting for you back in your suite, or a warm bath already set up for you to soak in. All our team members take pride in making your time with us the best it can possibly be.

GOURMET EXCELLENCE

Our fine cuisine has always been a jewel in our crown. Onboard our Expedition ships you'll have your choice of up to four different luxuriously appointed restaurants, where our world-renowned chefs will create dishes using only the highest quality ingredients.

SILVERSEA'S 900+ DESTINATIONS

From the Arctic to Antarctica, we strive to create the best, most unique itineraries in the world. We visit every single continent with a huge range of destinations - from extreme polar regions to the tropical equator, from iconic world cities to remote islands.
